SIX WEEKS' HONEYMOON IN A BALLOON

ROMANTIC AND THRILLING ADVENTURES OF PROFESSOR BAMLER AND HIS BRIDE ABOVE THE CLOUDS.

THE most thrilling Easter wedding trip of the season is that of Prof. Otto Bamler, the German aeronaut and educator—and his bride—who is also a skillful aerial navigator.

They are spending a six weeks' honeymoon in a balloon above the clouds.

Starting from Essen, Prussia, they are flying at will over Germany, Austria and France, alighting when it suits the bride's sweet fancy to spend a night at the opera in Berlin, or to attend a concert in Vienna, or a play in Paris.

A balloon cage is not an ideal bridal apartment, but still this one has been fitted up so as to be fairly comfortable. The car is sixteen feet long, with pointed ends, but five feet across in the middle. A couch was made sailships about the size of a Pullman sleeping car berth. At one end are the toilet arrangements, which are, indeed, quite as convenient as on a sleeping car. At the other end is the buffet, with an alcohol stove for making tea and coffee and warming canned meats.

Under the couch bed are stowed away the extra coats and blankets needed at night. For high up in the air, above the clouds, it is very warm in the sun during the day, even this early in the Spring, but at night the cold is severe and very penetrating.

Equipped like this the bright couple might tour a week or two in the sky without descending to earth, if they so desired, or if untoward currents of air should carry them out of their course, and away from convenient landing places.

But, as a matter of fact, they are planning to spend nearly every night at some comfortable hotel in the German and French frontier towns, with occasional flights to the large cities.

Already they have had some peculiar experiences. Dropping down one evening at dusk upon a village on the Rhine they tied their balloon to a tree and went to the inn. The villagers had been thrown into consternation by the swooping down of the strange air car.

Word was passed around that the couple must be adventurous cloppers. The hotel keeper refused them admittance and the big burgomaster ordered them out of the town. There was nothing for them to do but climb up the rope to their car and set sail again.

On another occasion, when they alighted at evening in a little French town, the officials looked upon them as German spies, and peremptorily ordered them away under threat of arrest and imprisonment. The villagers meanwhile scolded the professor's explanation that this was just an innocent wedding trip.

So it proved very fortunate that the car had been carefully fitted up for sleeping in.

Unusual as such a honeymoon trip might seem, it is not more so than the engagement and marriage of this romantic couple. For they first met in a balloon, and were introduced to each other a mile above the earth.

They afterward became engaged above the clouds with no envious eyes to see their first love kiss but the twinkling stars.

And finally, a fortnight ago, they were married in a balloon. So what more natural than that they should spend their honeymoon all by themselves flying among the clouds?

These twentieth century lovers are all the more interesting because they are people of considerable distinction in their own country. Professor Bamler is the founder of the Rhineish Aeronautical Club and a protégé of Emperor William. The

RIDING THE CAMEL'S BACK—BEAUTY'S NEW FAD.

ASTRID THE CAMEL'S BACK TO GET THE JOLTING AND TOSHING AND HEAVING THAT CHURNS UP THE BLOOD.

To be Sure It's a Machine Camel In a Sanitarium But Its Most Fashionable to Pitch and Heave and Toss On Its Humps Till Your Blood Cingles and Your Flesh is All Peach-Blow.

If you feel drooping, lagged out, that, of a peach blush. Well, you don't need to pale, utterly weary—as you are much likely to at this special season of the year—why just go out and take a ride on the New York. Even three you need not a camel's back. There's nothing, they say, like a rock on a camel's hump for stirring up your blood and restoring the red blood, to a person's faded cheeks. It's a wonderful vibrator and heartener rolled into one. Just try it.

It's a somewhat violent treatment, is true, but for a southern condition there must be a heroic remedy. Camel riding requires no experience in life except the violent lurching of a ship in a heavy sea. The humps upon which the rider takes a seemingly precarious seat have a carefully agitating motion of rotating. They seem to turn the unfortunate victim round and round with a choroidal motion that produces in the most eager sensation of weakness. Yet, while, frantic, camel riding is an exercise that is most invigorating.

It means the taxi plover to discharge its proper functions. It "fills up" the most heart and stomach to their normal duties. It sits up the tide. In a word, camel riding is a most effective stimulant to sluggish circulation and exhausted human machinery.

"But I can't get away to the back of the Nile," you say. "For a camel ride, even if it is a sure cure for a rapid time and will bring back to me the beauty reading desk or pillow. To this the person mounting her feet cannot so reach forth with her hand and stroke herself, as that she will not fearfully run the risk of this strangely foreign ship of the desert. Sooner has the rider mounted it than some hidden machinery is set in motion and the heaving and turning and pitching and rolling begins. The patient looks alarmed. If demonstrative, she places one hand upon her stomach. If timid, she clutches the substance of a reading desk with the other. She rises and falls and rocks from side to side with the motion of the two-humped reproduction of the two-humped scorpion of Sahara. Presently her pallor begins to disappear before the flush of interest and amusement. She laughs, and after a few minutes she begins to enjoy it. If after a five minute ride upon the stationary camel she happens to catch a glimpse of herself in a mirror her vanity prompts her to mount it again. For if she is frank she will exclaim: "What a live complexion I have."

There is an excellent substitute for the bareback gallop in the park. The gallop in the park requires nearly all of a morning. If we include the time spent in dressing and undressing, in the bath and with all the delays of morning toilette and of possible accidents. But through the drudgery had yielded it then. Now, five minutes lurching on an imaginary camel across an imaginary desert had restored it.

A woman who had taken a course of beauty treatment at the twenty-eighth street sanitarium went to Egypt and on a camel ride. To the astonishment of the imperious man of the East who guided the party, this member of it was quite silent as they set forth with the wind blowing in four directions at one stride of the big yellow beasts of the desert.

"Are you not tired?" he asked the sanitarium graduate.

LETTER WRITTEN BY THE SAVIOUR?

Father Gaffre finds an Ancient Manuscript of a Letter from Christ to King Abgar and Also New Evidence Concerning the Saviour's Likeness.

The Newly Discovered Letter Said to Be Written By the Saviour. To Abgar, the Tetrarch of Edessa, Greeting:

BLESSED art thou, O Abgar, and blessed is thy city which is called Edessa. Thou art blessed, because thou hast believed in me, although thou hast never seen me, and thy health shall be restored to thee for ever.

Concerning my coming to thee, it is needful that I accomplish the mission for which I was sent here on earth, and that after I have accomplished it I return to my father, who sent me.

But I will send to thee one of my disciples, called Thaddæus, or Thomas, who shall cure thy sickness and give thee eternal life and do what is necessary for thy city, so that none of thy enemies may triumph over thee, even to the end of time, Amen.

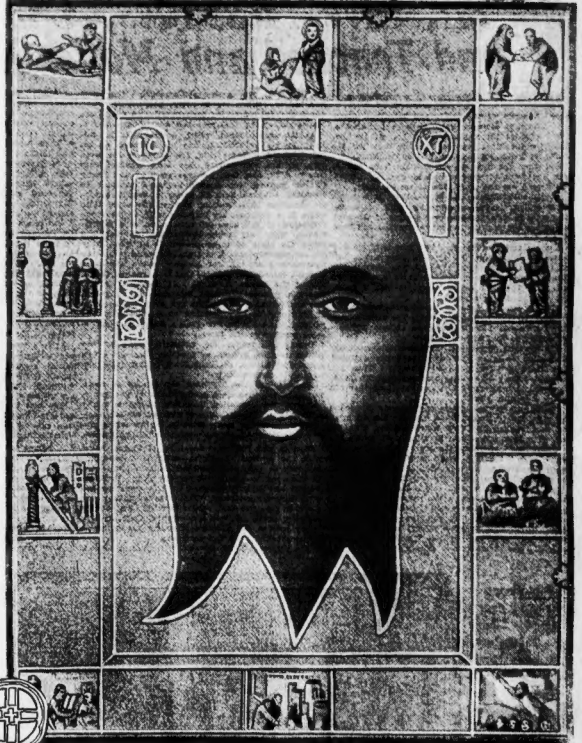

For I have left heaven and have come down to save the human race, and I have dwelt in a virgin's womb in order to expiate the sin of Adam in the lost Paradise, and I have humbled myself in order that thou mayest be exalted.

This letter written by me, wherever it shall find thee, whether on the road, in a house, before a tribunal, in time of trouble or of sorrow, upon the sea, in danger, in the midst of combat against enemies, or on any other occasion of a similar nature, this letter shall keep away all misfortunes, for it is invulnerable, sure and certain for every cure and every help.

Therefore, he who carries it, if he be pure and without reproach and abstain from all wickedness, shall possess in this for the cure of his soul and body a talisman of certain power, because this is written with my own hand, and I have sealed it with seven seals, in the following order: JESUS CHRIST, Son of God, known as of two natures, perfect God and perfect man. * * *

The Saviour Giving His Portrait to the King's Messenger, and Two Soldiers Carrying the Cloak of Christ, That Followed the Parable From the Manuscript Illustrations.

THE IMAGE OF EDESSA, AS IT APPEARS TO-DAY, IN THE GOLDEN CASKET IN THE CHURCH OF BARTOLOMEO, GENOA.

The manuscript was purchased from a very old Coptic or Egyptian Christian family, that without medicaments or herbs not to die to come into me. The king, it is decorated with very beautiful illuminated drawings or miniatures, those of the occurrences referred to in the letter, bearing to the death; which is borne by the King's courier, named Ananias. It is hardly necessary to explain that this is not a homonymy for years was healed, by and under the city, which would suffice for the wicked man whose terrible fate is described touching Thee and that Thou raisest Thee and art.

In the New Testament, Ananias was a common name in Asia Minor, and this one was evidently a faithful servant of King Thee, O Lord. I have conceived in my heart that Thou art either God himself or the Son of God, who has come down to earth, and man and physician, who has appeared at Jerusalem, greeting; and for this reason I supplicate and pray.

When Abgar received the reply and found that he could not persuade the Saviour to visit him he resolved at last to obtain the divine portrait.

"King Abgar," continues the manuscript, "then sent a courier, who was also a portrait painter, to the Saviour. When this courier arrived in the outskirts of Jerusalem he was received by Jesus, who said to him:

"Max, thou art a spy."
"But the courier answered:
"I am not a spy, Lord, but I am the messenger of Abgar, the Tetrarch of the City of Edessa, and I am desirous to complete the vision of Jesus of Nazareth and to make His portrait."

"Jesus then commanded him to enter into the city, where He began to instruct the people. The courier mounted on a high place and addressed the Saviour of Jesus, desiring to record Him on canvas; but a divine power prevented him from recording Him. The Saviour then sent one of his disciples, Thaddæus or Thomas, and having poured out water he washed His feet then under a cloth of linen He wiped it and the divine vision was impressed on the cloth and He delivered it to the courier and said to him: Abgar."

Stories of Christ and those of the Saviour, historians of the fourth century, have already recorded these occurrences in nearly the same form.

The courier brought the miraculous portrait to King Abgar, and when touched he was immediately cured of his terrible disease. The precious relic, the guardian of the health of Edessa, remained in that city for many centuries. The Manuscript found it there when they took the place as the tenth century, and they preserved it religiously.

In 944 Romanus Lecapenus, Emperor of Constantinople, succeeded in obtaining from the Emir of Edessa the transfusion of the holy image and the letter to Constantinople, where they were received on April 16, and with honors which the Greek Historians fully recorded.

The image was preserved first at the palace and then at the Temple of Pharos, where it was enclosed in a gold case, covered with arabesque and small images, which only left the face visible.

The Emperor, John Palæologus, gave the precious relic to Leonardo Montalbano, a Genoese, who had helped him greatly against the Turks in the fourteenth century, and through him it passed into the possession of the Dukes of Genoa. There it was placed in the Church of San Bartolomeo, where, after many adventures, it still remains.

It is guarded by six locks in a secret tabernacle, of which the six principal families of Genoa keep the keys. On the day of Pentecost and the two following days the tabernacle is opened and the image of Edessa is exposed for the veneration of the faithful.

THE ENTIRE MANUSCRIPT DISCOVERED BY FATHER GAFFRE, CONTAINING THE LETTER AND THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

THE Abbe Gaffre, a French priest, long noted for his scholarly researches in the East, has discovered in Egypt an ancient manuscript which contains what appears to be an authentic letter by the Saviour.

It will be recalled that the inscriptions recording the "signs" or new sayings of Christ, which are now generally accepted as authentic, were found in Egypt, and there is reason to expect more discoveries of a similar character in that country.

The new manuscript contains not only this letter, but evidence which indicates that an existing portrait of the Saviour, known as the Image of Edessa, is really a likeness taken from life. A long discussion has been going on in many countries among artists and students of sacred art, as to how the Saviour really looked. In these columns recently the theory of Ludwig Fabronius, a distinguished German artist, was explained and illustrated.

He believes that the Saviour should be represented as a beardless man because that was the custom of the race and class in which He was brought up.

This view is at variance with many of the most ancient portraits of the Saviour, found in the Catacombs and elsewhere, portraits which by many are believed to be accurate likenesses. The image of Edessa, whose accuracy is now strengthened, shows a bearded face of the well-known ancient type and thus sustains the traditional belief rather than the artist's fabricating.

The history of the newly discovered letter is an intensely interesting one. According to tradition and history, there was a ruler king or "tetrarch" named Abgar, who ruled over the city of Edessa in Armenia, beyond the River Euphrates. His name has been variously known in different languages as Abgar, Agbar, Abgar and Augar.

The King sent an embassy to Jerusalem, a tribute of Caesar, and Governor of Ptolemais, Palestine, Syria and Mesopotamia. The ambassadors, during their journey, heard of Jesus Christ and the miracle He had performed.

They sought and found an opportunity of seeing, close themselves and saw Him heal the sick with their own eyes, and their return the ambassadors related to King Abgar the wonderful things they had witnessed, and the impregnable faith against the Saviour of the Saviour and Pharisæes, who out of envy wished to compass His death.

Now it happened that King Abgar was afflicted with an incurable disease. When he heard the report of the wonderful deeds of the Saviour, he believed in Him at once, as if by a miracle. The King not usually expected that the Saviour would come to his aid.

Letters were exchanged between King Abgar and the Saviour. It is an ancient manuscript of these letters which has just been discovered by the Abbe Gaffre in Egypt. It is in Greek and dates from the sixth century, about 550 A. D. This is not a very long time after the death of Christ, and as the manuscript has always been preserved in the region where the first Christians lived, it is reasonable to believe that it is a first copy of the original document.

Many cases of baldness and faded hair of years' standing have been cured by the remarkable preparation which is being distributed from Mr. Keene's laboratory, and the results are far and wide. As a consequence, hundreds of persons are using this remarkable hair food with gratifying results.

What seems to make this treatment more popular is the fact that free trial samples are sent by mail prepaid. Those who desire to obtain this valuable preparation write to Mr. Keene at the Lorrimer Institute, Branch 27, Baltimore, Md., enclosing a small note free of charge, and much useful information about the hair, which will put them on the road to regaining their hair.

Humble, Earnest Thinkers

They Have Been Our Benefactors in the Past, as They Are in the Present—They Solve the Problems and Smooth the Way

WE are strangers to ourselves, we perceivers—we ourselves to ourselves; for this there is reason enough. We have never sought for ourselves.—From Nietzsche's "A Genealogy of Morals."

THOUGHT is our one weapon, our one force, our one earthly salvation. No matter what may be the problem, thought must precede its solution.

The heaviest, hardest, noisiest work is born of SILENT, INVISIBLE, SHAPELESS THOUGHT.

A great bridge must be built of iron and stone. There are hammering, chiselling, blasting—but back of all the NOISE there is the quiet thought in the engineer's brain, and THAT THOUGHT IS THE REAL BRIDGE.

History tells about THE NOISE of a great battle.

Canon, cavalry charges, galling guns, groans of the dying, the shouts of the commanders. All that is picturesque, but that is not THE BATTLE. The battle, the victory were in the THOUGHT of the quiet, steady man who planned every movement from the start of the battle to the enemy's defeat.

Our external, UNREAL lives are lives of noise, sound, shape, force, physical effort. The real life, THE ONLY LIFE THAT EACH OF US REALLY LEADS, is the silent, strange, mysterious thought-life within ourselves.

We do not, any of us, think enough. We talk, chatter, gossip, listen. We think only for a second at a time. Not one man in a million is capable of sustaining concentrated thought for as much as five minutes without interruption. We laugh at the monkey in the cage who walks gravely along the floor for a second, springs in the air to seize a banana, then sits philosophically scratching his head, then dashes at another monkey, then with a wild leap grasps the bars and shakes them and chatters. That is an animal representing the transitional stage between the purely animal life and the beginning of thought-life.

But of thought-life. We laugh at his grimaces, the stamping of his feet. But we are not so VERY much like him. We haven't travelled so MANY miles as he has. We have long millions of miles to go on the weary, dreary, slow, uphill road to civilization before we shall become really thinking beings. THOSE WHOSE REGULAR LIVES WILL BE LIVES OF THOUGHT, WHO WILL BE ABLE TO CONTINUE THE PLEASURES OF INTENSE THINKING AS RESISTENTLY AS WE NOW CONTINUE THE PLEASURES OF GOSSIP OR EATING OR DRINKING.

This admirable picture by Mr. Carter is intended to make you THINK ABOUT THE THINKERS. Mr. Carter shows you a monument erected to the benefactors of mankind, and at the foot, kneeling, savagely clad, and savagely primitive, but MENTALLY UNCONCENTRATED, he shows you the savage man, your ancestor, using his brain, puzzling out the problem, "How shall I fasten that flint spearhead to that piece of wood?" HE SHOWS YOU THERE THE FOUNDATION OF ALL THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE HUMAN RACE THROUGH ALL AGES OF THE PAST, AND OF ALL THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE FUTURE, MASTER OF ITSELF, OF THIS EARTH, AND OF ITS DESTINY WILL ACCOMPLISH IN THE MILLIONS OF YEARS AHEAD OF IT.

It may seem foolish to write an editorial and print a big picture about THINKING. I might be asked, "WHY NOT DEVOTE A WHOLE PAGE TO BRAGGARTING?" We all think, we all breathe, we cannot help it. What is the use of talking about it?

In our opinion, THERE IS MUCH USE. We all breathe, true, but nine-tenths of us breathe ineffectively. And consumption is the proof of our bad, defective, inadequate breathing. We all think, we are compelled to think. But ninety-nine out of one hundred of us think insufficiently, imperfectly, disorganically. And civilization's slow growth, ignorance, lack of success are all proof of our inefficient thinking.

To breathe properly you must THINK about breathing. You must remember that the top of the lungs require inflation to prevent consumption. You must remember that the chin must be held up and the neck back in order to keep the ribs from pressing upon the lungs.

And so it is with thinking. You must THINK ABOUT THINKING. The measure of your thought is the measure of your success. When you drift into a rut, when your feet and your hands do the work mechanically, when your brain goes to sleep, YOU ARE A VEGETABLE, OR A SPONGE, NOT EVEN AN ORDINARY, LOW CLASS VERTEBRATE. Stimulate your mind, wake it up, put problems before it, solve them; put others, THEN SOLVE THOSE.

Today let us think about THE HUMBLE THINKERS, THE LITTLE THINKERS OF THE PAST, AND THE WONDERFUL WORK THEY HAVE DONE.

The little thinkers are really the big thinkers. For the man who solves LITTLE problems solves problems that the tens of millions of human beings must meet each day. And so he helps the tens of millions of human beings. Whereas the man who shall solve the great problem, the cosmic problem of the government of this universe, for example, will satisfy the rare minds—the few. His work will be more glorious, but not as important to mankind generally as the work of the little thinker.

For the man who solves LITTLE problems solves problems that the tens of millions of human beings must meet each day. And so he helps the tens of millions of human beings. Whereas the man who shall solve the great problem, the cosmic problem of the government of this universe, for example, will satisfy the rare minds—the few. His work will be more glorious, but not as important to mankind generally as the work of the little thinker.

And he is one of thousands and millions of the human thinkers, the humble thinkers, that have done our big work. We praise Burbank, the agricultural wizard, who develops new fruit, new vegetables and flowers for us. What about the unknown women and men of the past THAT HAVE GIVEN TO US THE WHOLE WONDERFUL VEGETABLE WORLD AS WE SEE IT? You know that everything we get from the earth is the result of thought and study that go back tens of thousands of years.

We have our wheat and our rye and the other important grains. All of these were developed from mere weeds, from practically worthless weeds, long before history began to be written.

Women picking weeds from wild plants to grind them up for their children were the forerunners of the great wheat fields of the West. A great miracle of human intelligence was the transforming of wild weeds, wild fruit like the crabapple, all of nature's ill prepared savages products, into the marvelous world-feeding plants of today. And this was done BY THE HUMBLE THINKERS, THE UNKNOWN.

We admire the man who builds our great steamships, the Lucania, or some other. But he was not as valuable a thinker as the first simple man who put his promissory face in the palm of his hairy hand, asked himself why he couldn't make the wind push him across the water, AND THEN HELD UP THE DRIED SKIN OF SOME ANIMAL AND LET THE WIND BLOW HIM FROM ONE SHORE TO THE OTHER. He was the forerunner of the Lucania. He made possible the voyage of Columbus to America. For that voyage was only the simple "skin held up" on a bigger scale. He was the forerunner of man's conquest of the earth.

Some untaught, humble thinker, nearer to the monkey than to the man, probably, invented the art of sewing. It was rude work at first. A thorn was used to make holes in the skin of an animal, and threads of that skin, roughly cut, were pushed through the holes, and two skins were fastened together. There was the idea THAT HAS CLOTHED THE HUMAN RACE EVER SINCE THAT DAY. THE IDEA THAT UNDERLIES THE SEWING MACHINE! AND THAT TALLEST BUILDING IN THE WORLD THAT STANDS ON BROADWAY, AND ALL OF THE GREAT LOOMS THAT TURN OUT CLOTHES FOR HUMANITY.

If you have half an hour after you put down this page, think for yourself of the work that thought has done, and how humbly it is worked. Each human being has thousands of thoughts, perhaps millions. And there are hundreds of millions of human beings now on earth, and there have been hundreds of thousands and millions of them in the past, and there will be endless hundreds of billions of them in the future. And these minds are like the drops of rain that fructify the earth. In each raindrop there are endless molecules and atoms, combinations of the two gases that make up water, and that produce life. And in each human brain, in each little drop of cosmic thought put on this earth, there are the molecules, the atoms, the electrons of THOUGHT that develop the earth, and fructify it, and make civilization grow.

Each of us is a little drop. A THINKING DROP. And we differ from the water, and the plant, and the animal, in this. THAT WE ARE CONSCIOUS. THINKING DROPS. WE CAN PLAN OUR THINKING. WE CAN MAKE OURSELVES THINK. WE CAN REALIZE WHAT THOUGHT IS.

Cultivate thought in your OWN mind. Think of yourself as A THINKING BEING AND AS NOTHING ELSE. For a thinking being is what you are, and it is only as a thinking being that you have any importance in this world.

Remember that thought, above all things, is DEMOCRATIC. It is the small man, the humble man, who gives the big thought to the world. The man who invented the sewing machine was a humble worker. The inventor of the marvelous spinning jenny was a very humble and poor man.

Edison was simple and poor, so was Franklin, so was the man who invented the steam engine. Thought knows no rank, no birth. It is a mysterious gift, the gift of the INDIVIDUAL. YOU may have it. ANY man may have it, great or humble. The greatest thinkers and inventors have been the humblest.

THE MIND MUST BE ALIVE, alert, moving, working always. And any day the thought may come. The men that stand out in history are those that had millions of humble thoughts, AND THEN ONE GREAT ONE. Keep your mind busy. RESPECT it, reverse the power of thought that is within you; it is the only power that controls material conditions on this earth. You are the custodian of a wonderful faculty, and one flash within your brain may solve the problem that has held men down for thousands of years.

Respect the humble thinkers. Think on great things if you can, BUT GREAT OR SMALL, RESPECT YOUR BRAIN TO BE A DRONE. KEEP IT WORKING.

FORWARD!

GREAT ENTHUSIASM AT CONVENTION IN NEW YORK

INDEPENDENCE PARTY
NATIONAL CONVENTION
IN CHICAGO, JULY 27-28

To Adopt Platform and Select Candidates in Full Reflection of Public Sentiment.
After Both Old Parties Have Taken Their Stand for the Campaign.

The far-reaching enthusiasm already engendered for the cause is shown in the fact that no less than 5,000 independent voters—exclusive of the delegates—have thus far laid plans to journey to the convention and cheer its nominees from the convention hall into the heart of the great campaign.

From each Commonwealth will go four delegates at large and two others from the congressional districts. The delegates will be held there for several trains are to carry hundreds in the cohorts from New England. Friends of the cause in New Jersey and New York will combine in a big excursion; numerous sections of the West have arranged for the transportation of enthusiasts, and the South is to be equally well represented.

The place and the date of the convention were chosen by vote of the sections. The majority of the delegates were in favor of the South, and they were also unanimous in choosing a time well toward the last of July. At that time the conventions of the Republican and the Democratic parties will already have been held—their candidates known and their plattion. It is little probable that the platform will differ from the one adopted at the convention in New York, January 22.

The declaration drafted by the New York Independence party, by the convention and in the caucus of voters in various districts of the country, promises to be the shibboleth also of the Chicago Independence. These latter are, however, not so numerous as the delegates, but unless some brand new four or five called out there to support the Chicago Independence, the Chicago Independence will win on the declaration substantially as it was first enunciated on January 22.

The "left" will fall to account late in the entire gathering of the convention on January 23 and 24. It will be somewhat chosen for the eventful day of the 24th, but it will be a day of the Chicago Independence. The "left" will seat about four thousand people in the centre of the hotel and theatre section, in the very heart of the city, and will not permit any other party to sit there.

To Have a "Real Count of Heads."

There will follow the naming of the temporary committee, who is to deliver the first address. The naming of the committee, Adjutant-General, will take place on Tuesday afternoon, is designed to allow full discussion and suggestions by members and committeemen in the framing of the platform.

Meanwhile a "real count of heads," unknown in most national conventions of this generation, will decide who are to be the new vice-presidential candidates in the forthcoming presidential election. These, too, will be decided by a "count of heads" in consultation has been made, the delegates will choose their first standard-bearer.

Transportation is simpler, as it is determined to save for the influx of independent who will attend the big, convulsive

WILLIAM R. HEARST'S SPEECH AT NEW YORK CONVENTION

Delivered Before the Delegates of the Independence Party of New York in Carnegie Hall on the Evening of Saturday, May 2

MY FRIENDS—When I look upon this great hall, crowded in this inclement weather from the foremost seat of the lower floor to the last floor of the topmost gallery, I am filled with admiration for the vitality of movement which has survived two fusions.

This astonishing strength, attained under the most disfavoring circumstances, is but an intimation of what the party may achieve if it remain free from the contamination of fusion, and devotedly true to its own principles.

It has been difficult to prevent fusion while the Independence party was composed of disconnected organizations in different States, largely influenced by local conditions. Indeed, the National Independence party was founded not only to give this movement unity of organization, unity of purpose and unity of action, but to compel recognition of the fact that the League is not the trading club to be used for the benefit of politicians, but a great party to be devoted to the best interests of the whole people.

The members of this convention do not all know that I have been a most ardent and efficient convert to fusion in times past, and that I have argued strongly against it in the councils of the League.

There are many in this hall who have been on committees before which I have spoken, and what I have said to them privately I am now going to say publicly to all.

Fusion is merely a political adaptation of the Japanese custom of committing har-kari on the doorstep of your enemy.

Every fusion means a loss in strength, in standing, or at least in opportunity for the Independence League.

There are three stages of fusion, fusion, confusion and diffusion.

Now, my friends, either this Independence Party movement is necessary or it is not. If it is not, then let us go back into our homes and vote there and stay there; and if it is necessary, then let us not sacrifice our ultimate high aims and patriotic purposes for the false hope of temporary success. If we are sincere in our denunciation of the old parties, we must be consistent in our opposition to the old parties.

If the old parties are not good enough to vote for, they are not good enough to vote with.

I claim that even where fusion is defensible morally, it is unwise politically. Every time we fuse with the Democrats, we lead some of our ex-Democrats back into the ditch of Democracy, and drive some of our ex-Republicans back into the slough of Republicanism. The same thing happens when we fuse with the Republicans. And after fusion it takes at least a year's experience of Republican robbery or Democratic depravity to bring our lost sheep back into the fold.

Every time we fuse, we infuse some of our vigorous new blood into the veins of the decrepit old parties, and while that may do the old parties some temporary good, it certainly does us and the ultimate success of our cause incalculable harm.

That homely philosopher, Judd Phillips, declared that fusion was like a man making mistakes as never making the same mistake twice.

Experience has taught us that fusion is a mistake, and prudence, as well as public duty, should prevent us from repeating that mistake.

Our experiences, both in New York and Illinois, may be cited as illuminating examples of the evils of fusion.

In 1906 the radicals in this State claimed to have control of the Democratic party and declared that it would be deplorable if the progressives in the League and the progressives in the Democratic party should be divided, and the reactionaries, unopposed in the Republican party, should be allowed to win.

This argument prevailed, and finally the League fused with, or rather allowed the important candidates of its ticket to be endorsed by the Democracy.

The League's candidate for Governor was endorsed, the League's candidate for Lieutenant-Governor was endorsed, the League's candidate for Secretary of State was endorsed, and a compromise candidate for Attorney-General was endorsed.

It seemed like a complete victory for the League, but it was, nevertheless, a mistake. I had not advanced far in the campaign before I found that there could be no harmony without hypocrisy, and so I personally declined to fuse. I denounced McGarran, the Democratic boss of Brooklyn. I said that Murphy might be for me, but I was not for Murphy, and when Van Wyck came out in my support, I said I did not want the support of any traitor Mayor or any gas trust Mayor.

Of course I lost my election, but I saved my self-respect.

I was defeated by the machines of New York City and Brooklyn.

And I congratulate them on their foresight in defeating me, for my first act as Governor would have been to induce him, they admitted, of these corrupt machines out of office by the hair of their unworthy heads.

That is one experience. Another occurred in Chicago. The Independent League was re-nominated by the Democrats for Mayor of Chicago.

Judge Dunne was an able and conscientious man and his friends insisted that the League withdraw from contesting that election.

The Democratic machine was dishonest, but claimed, truthfully enough, that Judge Dunne was honest, and said that if the League did not support him he would not be elected, and the cause of reform would receive a setback.

The League finally defeated Judge Dunne, and the Democratic party defeated Judge Dunne.

The League brought many honest and sincere supporters, and the Independent League was re-nominated by the Democrats for Mayor of Chicago.

The League brought many honest and sincere supporters, and the Independent League was re-nominated by the Democrats for Mayor of Chicago.

The League brought many honest and sincere supporters, and the Independent League was re-nominated by the Democrats for Mayor of Chicago.

The League brought many honest and sincere supporters, and the Independent League was re-nominated by the Democrats for Mayor of Chicago.

given election, I maintain that it would still have been a mistake.

I declare that the formation of a new party, permanently devoted to rescuing the government from the control of selfish interests and restoring it to the impartial administration of the whole citizenship is of more importance than the election of any individual whatsoever.

The government of this nation was reposed in the hands of the whole people by the Declaration of Independence, by the Constitution and by the plain purposes of its founders.

It has been taken out of the hands of the people by powerful special interests who have controlled it and conducted it for their selfish advantage.

To express the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, to maintain the Constitution, to carry out the purposes of the founders of the government, to re-establish free government by fair majority rule for the benefit of the whole community, the Independence party exists.

There is a distinct danger to the Republic in the attempt to deprive the citizens of the free exercise of the liberties and the full enjoyment of the opportunities which the founders of the government secured for us and bequeathed to us.

There is a distinct danger, not only in the control of government by privileged interests, but in the interference of government with individual liberty.

There is a distinct danger, not only in the centralization of power, but in the exercise of that power for the favoring of friends and the persecution of enemies.

These evils have developed under the domination of the old parties, and will exist as long as the domination of the old parties continues.

These evils will only be corrected when only be corrected by a new party whose sole purpose is the pervicacious of the government as the founders framed it, and the preservation of the liberty and equality, the independence and opportunity which have been the invaluable inheritance of all American citizens.

TEDDY-B AND TEDDY-G; THE BEAR DETECTIVES

No. XXVI.—The Teddy Bears' Birthday. Verses by Seymour Eaton. Drawings by E. H. Twilvetrees

Copyright, 1908, by Seymour Eaton.

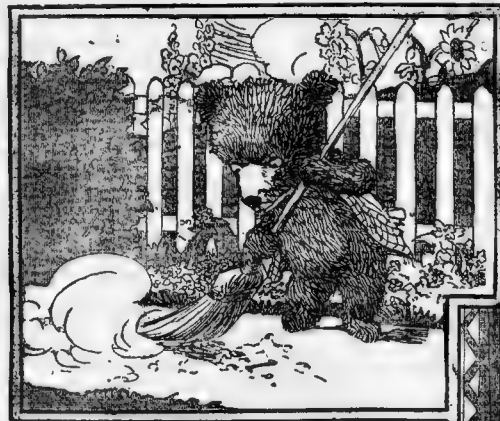

THE bears were born on a day in May,
But in what year they wouldn't say.
The date was found out just the same,
And all their friends that evening came
To wish them well and to celebrate
The great event and the historic date.

And Jack and Jill, linked arm in arm,
With things to eat from their little farm,
And Simple Simon in a sailor suit,
And the piper's son playing on his flute
And Billy Bink and Beamstalk Jack,
Each carrying presents on his back,

'Twas a surprise, and the Teddy Bears
Were taken entirely unawares.
TEDDY-B in shirt sleeves, working hard,
Was cleaning up their little yard,
While TEDDY-G, with brush and tub,
Was on his knees the way folks scrub.
'Twas Saturday, and they worked their best,
To have things clean for their Sunday rest.
They were nearly done; 'twas six o'clock,
When a crowd they saw, coming up the walk.

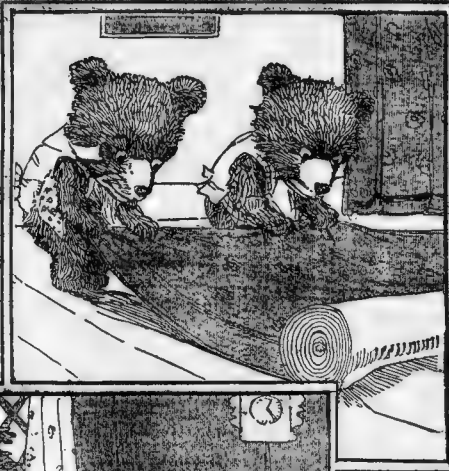

There was little Bo-Peep, who lost her sheep,
And Humpty-Dumpty, half asleep,
And little Jack Horner, who ate the pie,
And Little Miss Muffet, two feet high,

"TEDDY-B in shirt-sleeves, working hard,
"Was cleaning up their little yard."

And Old Mother Hubbard and her famous dog,
And Old King Cole, with two much grog,
And Red Riding Hood and Dicky Dock,
Who always carried a cuckoo clock.

"While TEDDY-G with brush and tub
"Was on his knees the way folks scrub."

"Straighten up that bed: this carpet lay;
That broom and dust-cloth put away."

"Had dressed themselves in their Sunday best
"And were having a quiet
evening rest."

"They were nearly done; 'twas six o'clock
"When a crowd they saw, coming up the walk."

And Little Boy Blue and Margery Daw,
The prettiest couple you ever saw,
And Cinderella in princess gown
And golden slippers and jeweled crown,
And Contrary Mary and Peter Pan,
And Johnny Stout dressed like a man,
And Handy Spandy, the famous dandy,
With birthday cake and a pound of candy,
And Old Father Graybeard, without tooth or tongue
Made up the party of old and young.

TEDDY-G jumped up when he saw the crowd,
And to TEDDY-B he called aloud;
"Put on your coat; come quick inside:
Help me these scrubbing things to hide;
Straighten up that bed; this carpet lay,
That broom and dustcloth put away."
Twas just two minutes by kitchen clock
When at the door they heard a knock,
But in that time the Teddy Bears
Had straightened carpet, bed and chairs.
Had dressed themselves in their Sunday best
And were having a quiet evening rest.
TEDDY-G walked slowly to the door,
As though expecting nothing more
Than a grocery bill or a postman's call.
Or a delivery man with a package small.

The door was opened and Red Riding Hood
With serious face before him stood,
"We've come," she said, "a detective band,
The smartest crowd in all the land,
To search this home, for we are told
That two Teddy Bears, both brave and bold,
Have hidden somewhere round the place
A birthday which we mean to trace.
The owners, too, we mean to find,
And if, good sirs, you'll be so kind
As to let us in and to help a bit
With all your wisdom and your wit
To find this birthday, you shall see
What smart detectives we can be."

CAR HURLS GARDIA, 3 WOMEN HURT.

Two Wellesley Gms and Lynn Teacher in Framingham Hospital After Collision.

ON A NATICK CROSSING
Speeding Worcester Trolley Car, Bound for Boston, Hits Vehicle.

GOING 35 MILES AN HOUR

Motorman Tried in Vain to Shut Down Brakes After Realizing Danger.

STRUCK by a Boston bound trolley car on the Boston & Worcester Railway as they were driving in a double carriage across the tracks just outside of Natick, two pretty young Wellesley College girls and a young Lynn school teacher, who was visiting them, had a miraculous escape from death yesterday afternoon.

Simultaneously with the crash, their horse ran away, the carriage was upset and broken into kindling wood and all three young women were hurled into the air and thrown beside the tracks. Two of them came within an ace of going under the wheels of the trolley car.

When Mary Francis and Miss Rose, the Wellesley girls, were badly injured and Miss Lynn, the teacher, was seriously hurt, the trolley car, which was going at the rate of 35 miles an hour, was stopped by the motorman in time to prevent a further collision.

Going 35 Miles an Hour

The trolley car was going between thirty-five and forty miles an hour at the time of the crash. The young women, who were driving the carriage, were on their way to visit their friends in Framingham. The carriage was a double carriage, and the girls and the teacher were seated in the front seat. The horse was a bay horse, and was running at a gallop. The carriage was upset, and the girls and the teacher were hurled into the air. The trolley car was stopped by the motorman in time to prevent a further collision.

Urged the Horse Forward.

The carriage was about half way across the tracks. The horse, frenzied, dashed forward and then backed, and in their predicament none of the girls had the presence of mind to jump. Instead they kept sitting the horse and the trolley car got on the way. The crash could be heard for a mile around.

Sent for Ambulance.

Miss Percival, the teacher, landed on the wreckage of the wagon, and was seriously injured. The girls were also injured, and were taken to Framingham Hospital. The trolley car was damaged, and was taken to the Framingham Hospital.

BLOODHOUNDS LEAD ARMED POSSE ON MAN-HUNT

Pursue Desperados Who Attempted to Carry Off Young Girls.

By Boston American Special Writer.
DANBURY, Conn., May 9.—Bloodhounds today were placed on the trail of the two desperados who, on Saturday night, carried off two young girls from the country house of Dr. L. W. White of New York City.

A posse of fifty men, armed with guns, revolvers, pitchforks and all kinds of weapons, are following the dogs, and when the fugitives are caught it is feared that they will receive summary punishment.

The bloodhounds, which were placed on the trail of the two desperados, were taken from the kennel of the New York City police department.

House Passes O'Connell Bill and Lodge Will Father the Measure in the Senate.

We (Boston American) Special Writer.
Washington, May 9.—The House today passed a bill providing for the establishment of an immigration station at Boston. The bill was passed by a vote of 250 to 150. The bill was introduced by Representative O'Connell, and will be fathered in the Senate by Senator Lodge.

HISGEN FOR PRESIDENT LEAGUE'S SLOGAN.

Bay State Convention Instructs Delegates to Present His Name at Chicago.

CHEER FOR STATE LEADER

"If Duty Should Call Me I Shall Not Shirk," Declares Springfield Man.

324 DELEGATES AT SESSION

Stirring Address of John Temple Graves Moves Gathering to Unbounded Enthusiasm.

THE four delegates-at-large from Massachusetts to the National Convention of the Independence Party were instructed yesterday by the Massachusetts State Convention, in Faneuil Hall, to cast the vote of the Bay State Independents for Thomas L. Hisgen as the party nominee for President. The National Convention will be held in Orchestra Hall, Chicago, July 27-28.

The League Convention was a great political demonstration, and it was followed by another. The Quincy House banquet of the Independence League City Committee last night was the equal of any political feast Boston has known in years. Its oratory was memorable.

These are the delegates-at-large to Chicago.

THOMAS HISGEN of West Springfield, independent oil dealer, polled 15,499 votes for Governor last November on the Independence League ticket.

WILLIAM N. OSGOOD of Lowell, former lawyer, first president of the Independence League of Massachusetts; one time Democratic candidate for Attorney General, on the William B. Russell ticket.

JOHN A. COULBERT of Boston, lawyer; three terms in the Massachusetts Legislature; gave up the secretaryship of the Democratic State Committee to ally himself with the Independence League. Candidate for Mayor of Boston, 1907.

MICHAEL C. O'NEILL of Boston, life insurance manager; left his native city of Dublin in 1871 to bring to this country. Congressman, who had served fourteen years in Dartmouth prison with David, MacCarthy and O'Brien; prominent in the 1907 League mayoralty campaign.

Three hundred and twenty-four Independents, representing the fourteen Congressional Districts of the Bay State, came to Boston for the greatest meeting of the League in its history.

Still Needed Here.

They instructed the State delegates to vote for Hisgen for President.

Hisgen, who is a native of Boston, is a man of great energy and ability. He is a man of great energy and ability. He is a man of great energy and ability.
